

Starfish Early Alert – Faculty & Staff

Fall 2021

Starfish Early Alert is a tool for instructors, student services, and campus resources to communicate with students and each other in order to help support student academic success. This system allows you to send information to students and other areas on campus regarding a student’s academic progress, alert others of a student’s specific needs, or refer students to support services. There are three types of Early Alert Tracking Items; kudos, flags, and referrals.

What Tracking Items are available Fall 2021?

All tracking items are listed in groupings according to college and are in alphabetical order on your STUDENTS tab in Starfish. All Reedley items are notated with “Reedley” at the beginning of the item title. Ability to raise tracking items is based on your role and connection to the student.

What happens when I raise a tracking item?

Each Early Alert tracking item has a specific and unique workflow built into the item to help provide students with the correct information and appropriate outreach. Some tracking items will generate an email to the student and/or other staff on campus. Several of the more sensitive items, such as the Behavior Intervention flag, generate only an alert to key faculty and staff so that timely and personalized outreach is provided.
